

DID YOU PURCHASE SRAM COMPUTER MEMORY OR ELIGIBLE ELECTRONIC DEVICES BETWEEN 1998 AND 2005?

IF SO, YOU MAY BE ENTITLED TO COLLECT FROM A CLASS ACTION SETTLEMENT.

The class action claimed purchasers paid too much for SRAM and products containing SRAM because some manufacturers conspired to fix prices.

WHAT IS THE CLASS ACTION SETTLEMENT ABOUT?

SRAM (“Static Random Access Memory”) is a computer memory chip found in many electronic devices. A class action lawsuit alleged that between January 1, 1998 and December 31, 2005 (the “Class Period”) some makers of SRAM conspired to fix prices—resulting in consumers, businesses, and other purchasers paying too much for SRAM and electronic devices with SRAM in them purchased in Canada. The class action lawsuit settled for $4.85 million. Now it is time to pay money to the people who bought certain quantities of SRAM and/or electronic devices with SRAM in accordance with the terms of the Court-approved distribution plan.

HOW MUCH MONEY CAN I GET?

If your request for payment is accepted, your request will be valued based on the amount of SRAM and/or the number of eligible electronic devices with SRAM you purchased.

Payments will be made on a proportional basis (i.e., the value of your request relative to the value of all approved requests), provided it amounts to $25 or more. Cheques will not be issued for amounts below $25.

HOW DO I GET MONEY?

Complete a request for payment before June 29, 2016. Requests can be submitted online at www.sramsettlement.ca. You can also ask that a hardcopy request form be sent to you by calling 1 (866) 982-8281.

DOES IT COST ANYTHING TO REQUEST A PAYMENT?

No, it costs absolutely nothing to request your payment.

WHAT INFORMATION DO I NEED TO REQUEST A PAYMENT?

A receipt is not required, unless your claim is selected for audit. If your claim is selected for audit, the claims administrator will contact you for more information.
